Today was our last day at school.

What a day! After ten years we had our final lessons today! I've never enjoyed school so much before. Well, it wasn't really a school day. We dressed up as school beginners with short skirts or shorts, knee socks and wore our farewell-T-shirts with all our names on them.

First thing in the morning, all the teachers and pupils had to climb over barricades in order to get to their rooms because we had barricaded our school corridors with toilet paper, balloons and silly things the day before. It was good fun to see how they had to struggle to get to their rooms. During the breaks we made a lot of noise with our whistles and rattles. The teachers had a hard job with us, I'm sure. After the 4th period, lessons were over and we started with our show in the playground. The afternoon before we had put up a big stage and a huge "cage" in front of it where all the teachers had to sit in. For our show we had prepared music, songs and dances, some quizzes and funny games which we played with the pupils and teachers. One of the best games was the imitation quiz. Some of us imitated the teachers and the others had to guess which teacher was being imitated. I suppose all in all everyone had a good time, the pupils and teachers laughed a lot and there was much applause. At the end of our show we signed shirts, sent balloons into the sky and said our final goodbyes. That was a very melancholy moment and some of us even had tears in our eyes. I'm a bit sad too that my school time is finally over.

Anyway, in the evening we're having a farewell party and I still need to get dressed. So I'd better hurry up.
